

STYLE OF CHARACTER

DESCRIPTION

You are considered as a person who is focused on your personal need and interest. You are considered effective in working, but the perception of being "egoistic" is more or less attached to you. There is an impression that you want to stand out for yourself or do not want to be defeated. You might achieve success in business and politics with or without the help of others because of your high work performance and passion to compete.

TO DEVELOP

To develop, you had better develop your humble personality. Avoid being prideful and arrogant. Grow sympathy and care for the need of others. Learn to listen to the issues of people around you. Sincerely help the ones who need your help, without any personal interest attached to it. Complement your competitive nature with the habit of giving a leadership role to other people around you. Once in a while, give in and let the others to perform, which might actually be good for you.

SELF-PROMOTERS